GOVERNING IN CRISIS: BIDEN AND THE LOOMING MIDTERMS

A VIRTUAL SPRING 2022 LECTURE SERIES

Upon assuming office, President Biden proposed an ambitious equity agenda, designed to address systemic racial, gender, ethnic, and economic disparities. One year into his Presidency, we will examine his record. He has made some historic picks to lead his Administration and nominated the first Black woman to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court. However, the Biden Administration's efforts to address voting rights, immigration policy, and economic inequalities have been stalled by a deeply divided Congress. And even a much scaled down social spending bill—which would have delivered some of the most consequential investments in the social safety net since the New Deal—seems dead in the water.

WEEK FIVE:

TAKING STOCK: BIDEN'S EQUITY AGENDA

Tuesday, April 5, 2022
Live via Zoom at 6:00 pm

GBH News Senior Investigative Reporter Phillip Martin leads a panel discussion to examine the present impact and future fate of Biden's equity agenda, the fierce backlash, and how this is likely to influence voter enthusiasm in the midterms. Joining him are Cheryl Clyburn Crawford, executive director, MassVOTE, Gregory Fried, PhD, professor, Boston College, and Tanisha M. Sullivan, Esq., president, NAACP, Boston Branch.
