Miles Rapoport,
Executive Director of 100% Democracy

What does a fully inclusive, fully participatory democracy look like? Is it possible to have such a system in the United States? In this talk, Miles Rapoport, Executive Director of 100% Democracy: An Initiative for Universal Voting, will discuss the challenges American democracy faces and ideas for reform, including a proposal for universal voting, which would make voting a civic duty required of every citizen—a proposal explained in the book 100% Democracy: The Case for Universal Voting, which he co-authored with E.J. Dionne. He will also discuss his work as Secretary of the State of Connecticut from 1995-1998, his work in the Connecticut legislature from 1984-1994, and his work as President of Demos and Common Cause.

"[100% Democracy] provides a strong base for beginning a consequential national discussion."
